WOMAN INJURED AT GLOSTER BLDG.

CRASH THROUGH ARCADE ROOF.

Gloucester Building was the scene of another serious accident—the first since its completion—this morning, when a coolie woman crashed through the glass roof of the southern arcade and fell over thirty feet to the stone floor below.

Occurring in the heart of the shopping district, the crash of the woman caused a considerable commotion and a large crowd quickly gathered.

Cleaning the Glass.

It was at first thought that the unfortunate woman had fallen from a height on to the glass below crashing through, but enquiries revealed that she was engaged in cleaning the arcade roof, a board being placed across the glass for the purpose.

The victim must have slipped and fallen very heavily to have broken the glass sufficiently to cause her to fall through. Curiously enough, the external signs of injury were few, though her wrist was badly cut.

Serious Injuries.

There is reason, however, to fear serious internal injuries as a result of the fall and the case is regarded seriously. The woman was still conscious when sent to hospital in an ambulance.

LEAGUE INQUIRY COMMISSION.

SINO-JAPANESE APPROVAL.

Paris, Jan. 11.—The Japanese and Chinese Governments have now approved the names of the members of the League Commission of Inquiry in Manchuria.

It now only remains to obtain the approval of the League Members of the Commission to be formally constituted and to leave for the Far East.

The members are:
Lord Lytton (Britain),
General Claud (France),
General McCoy (United States),
Dr. Schnee (Germany),
Count Aldobrandino (Italy).

WHEAT QUOTA SCHEME.

Modification of Proposals.

London, Jan. 11.—It is understood that in their modified form the Government proposals for the establishment of the wheat quota system will be acceptable to the various interests concerned.

Sir John Gilmour, the Minister of Agriculture, will meet representatives of the farmers, millers, merchants and flour importers to discuss the matter to-morrow.

Such alterations as have been made in the original proposals do not affect the Government's basic principle of a guaranteed market for millable wheat at an enhanced price.

If an agreement is reached at the outcome of to-morrow's conference, the Government will probably introduce a Bill soon after Parliament re-assembles on February 2nd.

WORLD BANKERS AT BASLE.

CREDIT RESTRICTED ON FRENCH DEMAND.

NEW CRISIS FEARED.

THE FINANCIAL STABILITY of Germany in the immediate future appears to have been placed at the mercy of France by a decision of the Council of the Bank of International Settlements to refuse to renew the credit maturing on February 4 unless the Bank of France, the Bank of England and the Federal Reserve Bank (United States) act similarly.

The significance of the decision is that M. Moret, the Governor of the Bank of France, who insisted upon this provision, indicated that the Bank of France was not disposed to extend their share of the credit for more than a month.

The declaration is interpreted as an attempt by France to obtain a stranglehold over Germany's finances, which will undoubtedly be employed as a lever at the Lausanne Conference on reparations, and to a renewal of the oft-repeated accusation that French banking interests are subject to dictation by the Government in pursuance of French foreign policy.

M. Moret, Governor of the Bank of France.

There is a grave danger of a financial crisis in Germany as a result of the uncertainty created, though meanwhile an attempt has been made to soften the effects in France of Dr. Brüning's reparations declaration.

"A WARNING TO GERMANY."

Basle, Jan. 11.—At the instance of M. Moret, the Governor of the Bank of France, the Council of the Bank of International Settlements, sitting to discuss Germany's credits to-day, unanimously refused to renew unconditionally the credit of $325,000,000 to the Reichsbank which expires on February 4.

Dr. Luther, the President of the Reichsbank, protested against the refusal, declaring his fear that it would adversely affect German currency.

He was, however, informed that the responsibility lay with the German Government, to which the refusal must be regarded as a warning.

Conditional Renewal.

A French stranglehold on Germany's finances appears to be threatened by the subsequent decision of the Bank of International Settlements, renewing the credit of $325,000,000 for a period of three months conditionally upon the Bank of England, the Bank of France and the United States Federal Reserve Bank renewing their credits of an equal amount to Germany.

French Threat.

This decision was adopted after the insistence of the French representative, M. Moret, and it involves the possibility of a crisis in German finances as M. Moret intimated that the Bank of France was not disposed to renew the credit for more than a month.

If this is the final French decision, the extension of the credit of the whole amount of $3100,000,000 can be only for a period of one month. The Bank of International Settlements also renewed its portion of the credit of Austria and Hungary on the same terms and the credit of $33,000,000.

LESSENING THE SHOCK. FRANCO-GERMAN TALK.

Paris, Jan. 11.—M. Laval, the Prime Minister, to-day received the German Ambassador.

The nature of the conversation has not been revealed, but it is assumed that the Ambassador gave M. Laval a further explanation of Dr. Brüning's reparations statement, calculated to calm French apprehensions.

Timely British Statement.

It is further felt in Paris that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald's well-timed statement is bound to impress the French Government and it now appears certain that France will attend the Lausanne Conference, which became a matter of doubt as a result of the first reactions to the declaration.

In City circles in London to-day, Dr. Brüning's statement regarding Germany's inability to pay reparations was received calmly, some such step having apparently been anticipated.

German Funds in London.

At the opening of the Stock Exchange, German loans experienced a setback, but a sharp recovery occurred towards the close, German Seven per Cents again reached 69 and the Five and a Half per Cents 63. The leading British funds finished the day, one-eighth to a half higher.

The growing influence of the Nationalists in Germany, strengthened by the Hugenburg Hitler alliance, is causing apprehension abroad, particularly as the Brüning Government has been forced to recognise the new power. Photos show (left) Herr Hugenburg, with Prince Eitel Frederick, and members of the Steel Helmet and Nazi organisations, and (right), Hitler, the real leader of the group.

NEW HITLER ROLE.

A STICKLER FOR PROPRIETY.

PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION.

Berlin, Jan. 11.—The desire of the German Government to avoid a presidential election in the present time of crisis will not be granted.

Herr Hitler, the leader of the Nazis, and Herr Hugenburg, his ally, the leader of the Nationalist Party, have decided not to support the prolongation of President Hindenburg's term of office by action of the Reichstag as was proposed at a meeting of Herr Hitler and the President a few days ago.

It is believed that the Government's chief rivals are each addressing a letter to Dr. Brüning, the Chancellor, declaring that while they desire to see President Hindenburg remain in office, this should be done by the vote of the people and not by the 'unconstitutional means' suggested by the Government.

Although, however, the Nationalist group will refuse to participate in action by the Reichstag for the extension of the President's term of office, it is understood that they would support him if he again stood for election.

Election Certainty.

In this case, President Hindenburg would be assured of an overwhelming majority.

The date of the presidential election which seems inevitable has not been definitely fixed, but it will take place some time during May.

BUILDING DEDICATED TO DISARMAMENT.

Geneva Jan. 11.—The first concrete step towards the Disarmament Conference was made to-day when a beautiful new building, adjoining the League secretariat, and erected specially to accommodate the Conference, was opened by the President of the Geneva State Council.

The Geneva State Council presented the building to the League, and M. Avonol, formally accepting the gift, expressed thanks, saying: "This conference will assume in character a solemn gravity which the authorities and the people of Geneva cannot escape. Therefore I ask the authorities and the people of Geneva to contribute their warmest and most active sympathy."

INDIA CRISIS.

Protection Against Molestation.

SITUATION CALM.

London, Jan. 11.—While the arrest of Congress agitators is still proceeding, Mrs. Gandhi being among the latest batch, the news from India indicates that the situation remains generally calm, and without notable incident.

Sir Frederick Sykes, the Governor of Bombay, addressing a conference of leading Indian and European business men to-day, emphasised that the Government did not intend to follow the example of Congress and the endeavour, by coercive measures, to compel order to flow in any particular channel.

Freedom For All.

The Ordinances, he said, were designed to protect trade from being hampered.

The Government insisted on freedom for everyone to trade how and where they liked, and would extend the fullest protection against molestation.

The Governor declared that the Indian Government adhered to the terms of Mr. MacDonald's statement at the close of the Round Table Conference, and asked for the co-operation of the sober elements in the community with the Government, which was striving to prevent a bad legacy being left for the future.

DOLLAR RISES SLIGHTLY.

MARKET STAGNANT, HOWEVER.

With silver slightly up in London, the Hongkong dollar advanced 1/8th this morning, the demand rate being 1s. 5.3/16d. The local market, however, is stagnant, as also is Shanghai.

The rise in London was 1/8th spot and 1/16th forward. There was a little bear covering, and the market was quietly steady. After the official fixing, the market ruled very quiet, with America uncertain. The New York silver quotation is unchanged, but the cross-rate has declined to 8.37 1/2.

LAMMA IS. RIDDLE.

LIGHT MYSTERY UNSOLVED.

Enquiries made this morning show that the police have so far been unable to trace the origin of certain mysterious lights seen off Lamma Island last night.

It was shortly after seven o'clock that the officer in charge of Cheung Chau Police Station observed a succession of white lights, resembling Verey Lights, these being repeated later some little distance away from the scene of those originally spotted. A police launch was later out to investigate.

The Water Police were reticent on the matter this morning, the officer on duty intimating that no report had been received, but, in any case, he was not authorised to divulge any information on the subject.

A telephonic enquiry made to the Cheung Chau Station elicited the reply that so far no explanation of the incident had been received.

BONHAM STRAND BLAZE.

FOUR-STORY BLOCK DAMAGED.

Fire partially destroyed No. 134, Bonham Strand East early this morning when an outbreak occurred on the ground floor of the premises, which was occupied by the Pak Sang Tong firm of medicine dealers.

The Central Fire Brigade were quickly on the scene, a call being received shortly after 3.30 a.m. Hoses were played on the fire from the adjoining and opposite buildings and in half an hour the flames had been subdued, by which time, however, practically the whole building of four storeys had suffered.

The entire house was damaged by fire and water, while the adjacent premises also suffered damage.

The ground floor and the first floor, which were occupied by the Pak Sang Tong were insured. The top was used as quarters for the workmen, while the second floor was vacant.

CHINESE ATTACK AND DESTROY POWER STATION.

CHINCHOW IN DARKNESS.

JAPANESE FIGHT DESPERATELY.

WHOLE COMPANY SHOT DOWN.

Tokyo, Jan. 12.

Every unit of a Japanese infantry company was killed or wounded last night in a fierce engagement with an overwhelming force of Chinese, described as bandits, who attacked the power station at Pataohao, plunging Hsinmin, Tahushan and Chinchow into darkness.

The Japanese force, according to a message from Mukden, first came into contact with the raiders at Hsinmintun, near Tahushan.

The "bandits" attacked fiercely and the Japanese infantry suffered severe losses.

Reinforcements were hurriedly despatched from Mukden, but before their arrival, the defenders had been completely cut up and dispersed, and the bandits had attacked and destroyed the power station at Pataohao.

34 Killed: Remainder Wounded.

The Japanese casualties are stated to have been four officers and thirty men killed, and the rest of the company wounded. The Japanese fought desperately against the overwhelming force of the raiders, believed to number 5,000.

A Japanese armoured train which went to the assistance of the desperately fighting remnants of the company was derailed and overturned near Hsinmintun, where a section of the railway line had been destroyed by the bandits.

Power Station Battle.

Later. It is now learned that ten of the men of the original company at Hsinmintun extricated themselves from the encounter unharmed and took up defensive positions at Pataohao power station.

When the remainder of the company had been overwhelmed, they found themselves facing the full force of the raiders, but held to their posts determinedly and were still fighting until the Chinese forces got inside the power station and blew it up.

It is believed that these ten survivors of the original engagement were blown up with the power station. Their fate is unknown.

A few of the reinforcements sent from Mukden eventually got through to the battle zone and with some of the original company who had been only slightly wounded, succeeded in driving off the bandits, who however carried out their programme.

The officer in command of the troops remaining at Pataohao had informed battalion headquarters at Tahushan that they are now holding Hsinmintun.

It is believed that very heavy losses were inflicted on the attackers.

Another Engagement.

Peking, Jan. 12. It is stated that fighting is going on between Chinese forces and Japanese near Chaoyang. The Chinese have a force of 7,000 actively resisting the Japanese advance, and by sheer force of numbers they have repulsed every attack.

They have suffered several hundred casualties, but claim that the Japanese losses have been heavy. Chinese sources report that the attack on Hsinmintun was carried out by "volunteers."

DEGREE DAY AT UNIVERSITY.

VICE-CHANCELLOR'S SPIRITED ADDRESS.

SCHOLARSHIP NEED.

The Great Hall of the Hongkong University presented a colourful sight yesterday afternoon, when the 23rd congregation was held and degrees presented. His Excellency the Chancellor, Sir William Peel, and the Vice-Chancellor, Sir William Hornell, headed the big procession of Government officials and prominent citizens.

The congregation was declared open by the Chancellor immediately after tea. In his address Sir William Hornell said:

On March 16, 1931, this University's first Vice Chancellor, Sir Charles Eliot, died at sea. Sir Charles was a great scholar and a great gentleman. As I said when many members of the University met in this hall to pay to Sir Charles their last tribute, looking back over this University's troubled history, I have sometimes wondered and still wonder whether the institution would have survived the years of its precarious infancy, had it not been for the personality and reputation of its first Vice Chancellor. May I repeat something else which I said on this same occasion, namely, that it is fitting that we, while we deplore our loss, should determine that this University which meant so much to Sir Charles Eliot, should be maintained in a manner worthy of the great scholar who was its first executive head.

On March 28, 1931, the University's first Professor of Medicine, Dr. John Anderson, died in hospital at Shanghai. He was taken in the fullness of his vigour. To his many friends who met in this hall to testify to the affection in which they held him, I suggested that as the years rolled by and the University grew into manhood, it might be that many more eminent Professors than John Anderson would occupy its Chair of Medicine, but that I doubted whether any of his successors would be more universally beloved in Hongkong. Dr. Anderson died a comparatively poor man, but he did not forget this University. He has bequeathed to the University the sum of £250 free of duty, for the establishment of a prize in the form of a gold medal to be given annually to the medical student who attains the highest aggregate of marks in all the professional examinations.

Recent Arrivals.

In December, Dr. Leslie Davis arrived from Cairo (he had been previously in the Sudan) to fill the vacant Chair of Pathology. Earlier in the year, Mr. N. H. France came from Cambridge to be the University's Reader in History. The University has been fortunate in securing the services of these two officers. On behalf of you all I extend to them a hearty welcome and hope that they will be happy here.

The Boxer Indemnity unto which this University had for so many weary years of waiting lifted up its eyes in hope, was disposed of by an Act of Parliament which on March 3, 1931, found its way on to the Statute Book of Great Britain. Under the provisions of this Act a sum of £255,000 has been paid over to this University. This sum has been invested in War Loans in London.

A leading article in one of the local newspapers, criticized this arrangement. "Why did the University not take advantage of the exchange and invest the money locally?" It seems that under existing financial conditions no one can ever do the right thing, for when the University in 1930, was in grave financial difficulties owing to the collapse of the dollar, the cry was "all this might have been prevented if only a reasonable proportion of the University's funds had been invested in sterling securities. The collapse should have been foreseen". Perhaps if we had foreseen it, some of us would not be here; but seriously, trustee securities are not easy to find in Hongkong, nor do they yield anything like the interest they used to yield a few years ago. Attractive Shanghai mortgages have been taken up, but I doubt whether it would be wise to invest all the University's funds in Shanghai.

Destination of Fund.

The rest of the Indemnity, the total value of which is over £11,000,000, has been assigned under the Act in the following manner. A sum of £200,000 has been paid to the Universities China Committee in London, to be spent on certain purposes specified in the First Schedule to the Act. The remainder of the balance of the fund, that is to say the money which had already accrued as the result of payments already received on the Indemnity's account, minus the expenses properly chargeable to the fund (in which expenses the amounts of £265,000 and £200,000 which have now been paid respectively to the University of Hongkong and the Universities China Committee in London are included) is to be paid to the Chinese Government Purchasing Commission, a body which in accordance with the provisions of the Act has been constituted in London "to enter into, and to supervise and secure the carrying out of contracts for the supply and delivery in China of such plant, machinery and other articles, to be manufactured in each case within the United Kingdom, as the Chinese Government may from time to time request them to purchase."

As to the future payments of the Indemnity—payments which will amount before the Indemnity has been paid off in 1945, to £7,847,098/4/9—half of each such payment, as it is made, is to go to the Chinese Government Purchasing Commission in London and half to a Board, since appointed by the Government of China in accordance with the terms of the Act "to be trustees for the purpose of receiving those moneys and applying them to objects mutually beneficial to China and the British Empire." During the course of the negotiations which preceded the surrender of the money the Chinese Government had expressed their intention of dealing with the funds in harmony with the general views set forth in the report of the Anglo-Chinese Advisory Committee which was published in 1926 and was based on the recommendations of the Willington delegation.

Dr. Wang's Views.

On September 19, 1930, Dr. C. T. Wang who was then Foreign Minister to China, wrote thus to Sir Miles Lampson. "The Chinese Government proposes in the first instance to apply the bulk of the funds to the creation of an endowment to be subsequently devoted to the educational purposes mentioned in the Report of the Advisory Committee." "It appears to the Chinese Government," Dr. Wang continued, "that the most advan-ageous plan for providing such an endowment would consist in the investment of the greater part of the said Indemnity funds namely the accumulated funds now on deposit and all future instalments, in rehabilitating and building railways and in other productive enterprises in China."

The upshot of all this was that in 1901 the British Government accepted a sum of £11,156,547 in settlement of actual payments incurred in connexion with the Boxer Rising and of claims submitted by British subjects for losses sustained in the course of that disturbance (which claims incidentally had after careful scrutiny, revision, and adjustment, been fixed originally at £16,518,810) and that the British Government, having in 1922 decided to devote the whole of the Indemnity to the mutual interests of His Majesty and the Republic of China, implemented in 1931 an arrangement in accordance with which £255,000 have come to this University, £200,000 have gone to the Universities China Committee in London, some £7,439,000 will eventually go to the Purchasing Commission in London, and some three and a half millions to the Board of Trustees. The Government of China have agreed that the last two sums shall form an endowment for educational purposes mutually beneficial to China and the United Kingdom. It remains to be seen who will eventually benefit from this endowment the capital of which will be nearly eleven million pounds.

Invested in London.
I have said that the contribution of £255,000 which the University received from the Indemnity was invested in War Loans in London. The investment was at the time calculated to bring in a return of about 5 per cent, but the position in London has changed since the investment was made. It was estimated in June last year that

Gems of Peril

CHAPTER XXVII

HAZEL CROSS HAILEY

Mary was convinced beyond any doubt that the Count Enrique De Loma whom Ethel had infatuated with was The Fly. And Cornelia Tabor had barely missed having him in her house as a week-end guest!

It was frightful, and it was laughable. But most of all it opened up a new view of The Fly and his methods. So that was his game—tricking silly society girls with the old little racket! Whether his name was really De Loma did not matter; probably it was an alias. If so, it was a new one for Bowen had searched police files for a record of a man by that name and found nothing. Also—and this gave her renewed heart for the chase—it was probably the name he would continue to use.

She dared not tell Dirk what she was thinking. He would think her utterly mad, looking for The Fly and finding him in every stranger who crossed her path. But there were some questions she simply had to ask.

"Did you see him at all—De Loma?"

"No."

"He didn't give Ethel his picture or anything?"

"No." Then he added pettishly, "What do you care, anyhow? Not going to fall for him, too, are you?"

She looked reproachful at him. But the thoughtful pucker did not leave her brow.

"When did he call up and tell her he wasn't coming?"

"I don't think he did," Dirk answered after a moment's consideration. "I think she said he failed to show up and when she called his usual hang-out they told her about his father dying and his having to go home to look after the estate." He looked at her. "You think he just ran out on her?"

"My idea was," he went on, "for you to give out a statement—just a few lines, no more—denying it in a dignified way. It's too late to stop a lot of fools from gaping over it, but it's the best you can do—now the harm's done. You'd have to say, of course, what it was you did choose—a ring or a pin or whatever it was, just for the sake of sentiment. It would help to quash this gold-digging notion about you that everybody seems to have."

"Did De Loma know that?"

"Probably. I said he wasn't out to marry money." Dirk roused himself suddenly, crushed out his cigarette and put his arms around her. "But why are we talking about them, sweetheart?" he said gently. "Why are we talking at all?"

Why, indeed, Mary thought happily after several blissful, speechless minutes. This was what she had been longing for, for days. How had she ever lived through them alone? She sighed deeply. Well, that was all over now—Then she remembered. To-morrow she was going away! Her heart cried out against separation from Dirk again.

She clutched him tightly. "Come along with us," she begged. "I can't bear to lose you!"

Dirk stroked her hair gently. "You really want me?"

Her eyes answered him.

"Better still," he suggested, "don't go. Stay here."

"Everything's ready. I've got to go. Besides, I've just learned some thing that may be of great importance. There's too much at stake."

now. Dirk," she turned toward him suddenly, an agony of pleading in her face. "Dirk, don't you believe in what I'm trying to do at all?"

It was very still in the room, which was lighted only by dim wall brackets and the flicker of a small wood-fire.

"I believe in you," Dirk said, presently. Mary's searching eyes saw his face contorted with the effort to speak fairly and plainly. "That is, when I'm with you. When I'm away from you, I get—wild ideas. Other people say things, and it hurts. I shouldn't listen. I know. But I do. Because it's you." His hand gripped hers until her benumbed fingers ached with the pain. "You mean so much to me that the least breath—the least suspicion—" He stopped and held his lower lip with his teeth like a man in physical pain.

Mary was appalled. "What do they say?" she whispered.

"Oh, nothing that's true—at least, if it is I don't believe you realize it. I think you're perfectly innocent about it. That the Jupiter money has turned your head—that you're being nice to the old man just for what you can get out of him. God, if they knew about that will what a jabber there'd be! And of course that newspaper story about you last week was just about the last straw—coming right out with the intimation that you'd had the rotten bad taste to choose that horrible necklace..."

Mary was silent, stunned.

"There's nothing I can say," she faltered, as Dirk seemed to be waiting for some comment.

"My idea was," he went on, "for you to give out a statement—just a few lines, no more—denying it in a dignified way. It's too late to stop a lot of fools from gaping over it, but it's the best you can do—now the harm's done. You'd have to say, of course, what it was you did choose—a ring or a pin or whatever it was, just for the sake of sentiment. It would help to quash this gold-digging notion about you that everybody seems to have."

Mary said "I couldn't do that, Dirk. I did choose the necklace."

Dirk said "Oh, Mary." It was almost a groan.

"It was bad taste but I need it. I have to have it. When The Fly's been caught with it, it can go to the bottom of the sea for all I care. Why you make so much of it, though, is beyond me..."

"You're going to wear it? In public, where people can see?" He said it as if he were asking whether she meant to go out naked. "Later, perhaps—but not now, surely."

"Now, if necessary. Whenever I must." She felt as if she must burst into uncontrollable laughter.

"Dirk," she said, "this is the most ridiculous thing I ever heard of. It's such a little thing to cause such a big row."

And what?

wrong with the Jupiter money? Don't you want me to have it?"

He was almost insane with jealous anger as he saw when he turned his distorted face toward her. "I darsay it's small of me," he said sarcastically, "but I don't! How do I know what that old fool thinks he's buying when he turns his entire fortune over to you? How do I know his son isn't right when he tells Masterson, the critic, that he's too busy to have an exhibit now—he's got to rout his old mistress? How do I know the old reprobate didn't shoot his own wife to get rid of her? He stopped the police investigation, didn't he? And why did he do that? Because it threatened you, or himself? I don't know. I wish to God I did!"

"That wild kid brother of yours and his threats when Jupiter refused him money make a handy peg to hang the murder on. Maybe he really did it. Maybe he only knew who did it. Eddie was killed purposely, perhaps, by someone who wanted to shut him up. You want me to think some mysterious gunman was responsible for it, for the first murder and Eddie's, too. And you wonder why I don't fall in with your fantastic tale! A Lorimer car killed Eddie; a Lorimer car carried the murderer to and away from the house, after Mrs. Jupiter was killed. Whose Lorimer car? Why not Jupiter's?"

"Jupiter's?" Mary asked, stupidly.

"His, yes! You didn't know he owned a Lorimer car, did you? Well, he does."

"Oh, Dirk," Mary wrung her hands, "how can you say such things of a sweet old man like that? You don't know him! Why, he's never said or done a single thing..."

"I don't know him," Dirk grunted, "and neither do you. How long has his wife been dead? Two months. Well, he knows better than to make a pass at you so soon. He knows the sort of girl you are, that a false move would repel you."

Mary smiled, but there was no humor in the smile.

"Then you don't believe I'm as bad as Bruce and other people say I am?"

Dirk glowered mutinously. He gathered her roughly into his arms, held her cramped and breathless as if he would never let her go.

"Come on away with me," he begged, "out of this house. Damn it, it hurts me every time I come here to see you. It's ugly, for all the money that went into it. Maybe because of the money that went into it. And its ugliness has come on you. You're going to be smeared with it and I can't get you away... I can't make you see."

He was breathing hoarsely, almost crying.

"But what about Bowen? He couldn't be in the plot, even if the rest were true. And it isn't... it's too preposterous!"

"Bowen's just a cheap sensation-monger, as I've always tried to tell you," Dirk remarked, irritably.

There it was again. Mary stirred restlessly in his arms. Pulling away from him, she sank to the couch, put her forehead in her hands.

"You've got to think," she said. "I'll tell you later what I decide to do."

"Does your father believe all this you've been telling me? If he thinks Mr. Jupiter murdered his wife, why does he remain his lawyer? His friend?"

"I don't know what Dad believes. He wouldn't desert Jupiter if he murdered a township, though. Jupiter Motor Car stock is about all we've got that survived the crash, you know. We owe him gratitude for that. Besides, Dad's his lawyer, remember. He wouldn't turn against him any more than a doctor runs away when his client falls ill."

"Besides," he went on miserably, "what men do isn't important—to men. It's what women do, that hurts."

"And I've hurt you," Mary murmured, sadly. "And there's more to come."

"You think you'll go, then?"

"I have to go," she told him doggedly. "I can't quite believe—I've got to find out the truth for myself."

Dirk stood up with an air of finality. He looked very white and tired.

"If you go—" he said in a frightening voice, "if you go, I'll know that you—I'll know—"

He choked and stopped. Whatever it was he would know Mary was not to learn, for with a twitching face he turned and bolted from the room.

POST OFFICE NOTICE

PARCEL MAIL.

The Public are hereby warned that in view of the passing of the Abnormal Importations Customs Duties Act, no guarantee can be given that any parcel will not be subject to Customs duty on arrival in the United Kingdom. The system of prepayment of Customs' duties in this office is cancelled until further notice except as regards parcels of silk or of under the value of £5—0—0 or its equivalent in dollars at the rate of the day. It will however be necessary in these cases to make a deposit against duty equal in amount to the declared value of the Parcel.

Definite information will be published in the Mail Notices directly it is received.

Letters and postcards for Europe and South America are forwarded "Via Siberia" if it is convenient.

The public are hereby notified that under the Regulations of the Wireless Telegraphy Ordinance all wireless licences issued during 1931 expired on December 31st and are therefore due for renewal. Application for new licences or for renewals should be made to the Government Radio Office, Ground Floor, P. & O. Building, Des Voeux Rd. Central. The classes of licences and the fees therefor are as follows:—

| For | Amount |
|----------------------|---------|
| Broadcast Reception | $10.00 |
| Amateur Transmission | $15.00 |
| Ship Station Licence | $25.00 |
| Dealers Licence | $50.00 |

Letters will be accepted at Hongkong for transmission by Air Mail from Calgary to Montreal (Canada). Such letters must be handed in over the Counter of the General Post Office or Kowloon Post Office and must be superscribed "Air Mail Calgary-Montreal". The Air Mail fee, which is additional to the ordinary postage, is 70 cents per ounce.

WOMEN'S WORLD FOR OUR LADY READERS.

BEAUTY HINTS.

(By Alicia Hart.)

Give beauty your ears!
She has some charm secrets that are centring around them, which, she can't get across if you insist on keeping them buried under your red or black or brown or yellow locks.

Ears are definitely back in the style picture again. The clustering of curls behind the ear leaves the ear itself pretty much exposed for anything that you want to tell it today.

If your ears are too large let some of your hair droop across them.
You may be able to make them interesting and intriguing if you are skillful enough. But don't bury your ears under your hair. That custom is gone.

The lobe of the ear is part of your facial ensemble and belongs in the picture.

To increase its attractiveness use a touch of rouge on the lobe of the ear. Make sure that it tones with your cheek rouge.

See that this rouge is blended properly. Otherwise it may look as though you accidentally touched the lobe with a finger that you had used in working in cream rouge on your cheeks or lips.

If your ears annoy you in any way
if there is any sort of skin condition that makes them unattractive —by all means consult a competent physician. You may use aids on your hats and even on your nose, but never on your ears. They require the attention of a specialist.

Earrings.

The custom of wearing earrings is an old and primitive one. Everyone in so often it comes to again.
It is always more pleasing to see the form of decoration when the ear itself shows than when it doesn't.
Some sizes of ears do not look well in earrings. Other faces have a contour that isn't adapted to them.
You must study your own problem and decide if you can, or cannot wear earrings, and if you can, which type will do things for you.

Remember that even an earring is supposed to assist with the setting that shows you off. You are not a display window for showing off ornaments.

Heavy earrings are unwise, always, as they pull down the soft lobes of your ears in a manner that is decidedly ugly.

Now that ears are showing, be twice as sure to brush perfume on your hair behind your ears.

SEAL—FOR WINTER.

Hudson seal is most important for winter. This attractive coat of that fur is trimmed with a luxurious collar and elbow cuffs of mink. With it is worn one of the new felt hats, trimmed with a feather cockade. Bag and gloves are of suede.

A NEW VIEWPOINT.

That Fatal Sense of Humour.

That a sense of humour is responsible for the failure of many modern marriages is a point of view which is apt to come with something of a shock. Surely, it might reasonably be pleaded, humour is the most wholesome and indispensable ingredient in the recipe for happiness in any circumstances.

Undoubtedly, yes, if by a sense of humour, we understand the capacity to laugh at our own foibles. But with so many people, this humour complex is almost inseparable from a touch of cruelty.

At a Southend Police Court recently a disconsolate husband objected that his wife would persist in calling him "Onions," because, she explained, she wanted to weep every time she looked at him. Such a joke, originated in a thoughtless minute of levity, and repeated at every opportunity, may easily induce a situation where husband and wife get on each other's nerves.

Laugh With People.

It is not that a sense of humour in itself is wrong. To suppose that would be ridiculous. Laughter will sweep across a household like a breeze of sanity, blowing away the cobwebs of depression and disagreement, always providing that it has not been started at someone else's expense.

So long as we can laugh with people instead of at them, laughter is a gift of the high gods and to be treasured accordingly.

But what can be said for that worst type of offender, the wife who uses her husband as a butt for her pointed shafts in company? Generally speaking, he is a slow-thinking fellow, or he would promptly repay her in her own coin. And when a slow-thinking person harbours resentment, the flame is apt to burn until a conflagration is kindled which will sear the original culprit. This is the explanation of many apparently irreconcilable quarrels which have wrecked marriages. Bystanders are often bewildered at the trivial nature of a quarrel which will lead to a separation, but if the full history of the case could be traced, in a large proportion of instances it would be found that an undisciplined sense of humour was responsible.

A Desire to Shine.

There are very few men alive who can ever learn to laugh at their own faults, and the thing above all others which no man will ever forgive is being made to look ridiculous. He will resent it particularly if he is shown at a disadvantage in the presence of his own children. There may be times with a humourless individual when it will cost an effort to take him seriously, but the effort is worth making, and in common kindness it must be made.

It is seldom that the wife with a stinging sense of humour deliberately wishes to be unkind. Often she is shocked, and even, unreasonably enough, rather resentful, when she learns that her flashing retorts are so many stabs in the flesh of one whom she loves. But the desire to shine is deep-rooted in almost every woman, and when she has a natural gift for repartee, the temptation to give it scope is often irresistible.

When a man has a clever and witty wife he is usually proud of her, and it is surely suicidal therefore to scourge him with the very trait which has helped to win his love.
It may be clever for a wife to think out witty retorts at her husband's expense, but it is often infinitely more clever—and more difficult—to leave them unsaid.

TUESDAY, JANUARY 12, 1932.

IDEALISM AND PRACTICALITY.

The keynote of Sir William Hornell's altogether admirable address at yesterday's degree ceremony was a plea for the recognition of practicalities. By all who have a proper conception of the functions of our University, and who are not led away either by specious idealism or foolish catchwords, his remarks and the attitude which they reflect will be heartily endorsed. There is need periodically for us to stop and ponder over the aims of our University and, if needs be, to get back to essentials. In some quarters in the past, we fear, there has been much wrong thinking on this matter. Such sentiments as these expressed yesterday by the Vice-Chancellor should prove a wholesome corrective. Fanciful ambitions which bear little relation to the realities of life will get us nowhere.

Sir William Hornell assures us—and he obviously knows what he is talking about—that the University's School of Chinese Studies has been a failure. It is this fact which makes it necessary to reconsider the whole issue of the claims of Chinese as against those of the other activities of the University. The matter is now engaging the attention of a committee in connexion with the use of the grant made from the Boxer Indemnity Funds. The Vice-Chancellor reminds the enthusiasts for Chinese learning—some would call them the cranks—that they must not forget the exigencies of modern life, and he does well to declare that the yoke may be too heavy for the average boy or girl to bear. It is true that the University has certain statutory obligations in the way of providing facilities for the study of Chinese language and literature, but there is a very real danger that in discharging those obligations, matters of greater practical moment may be forced into the background. As Sir William puts it, China to-day wants not only administrators, but doctors, engineers, lawyers and commercialists. Without them, she cannot progress and play her rightful part amongst the nations of the world. It is in the training of young men in these spheres that the University of Hongkong can do a great work; indeed, this was one of the main objectives envisaged for the University when it was founded. Here also we touch the complementary point that the University should be made the radiating centre of British educational influence, technical and otherwise, in the Far East. There is no doubt whatever that a great need exists for facilitating the passing of picked students from the University to the universities, technical institutes and workshops of Great Britain. We all know, as Sir William Hornell pointed out yesterday, how much importance the United States attaches to this matter and how beneficial in the long run such a policy is to the spread of American ideas and the opening up of American business opportunities.

We judge from Sir William Hornell's remarks that the University badly needs funds with which to endow scholarships for the purpose mentioned. It might be argued that here would be the best possible use to which the Boxer Indemnity grant could be put, but it is common knowledge that the University has long past had its general functions badly cramped by reason of lack of money, and it is to be presumed that the recent windfall will be needed for other purposes. At the same time, we should like to see part of the grant, if possible, devoted to the creation of these much-needed scholarships. Sound and valuable work may be expected of the proposed new Technical School when it is brought into being, provided it is established on sound lines and is efficiently directed. Even so, the University will still have its part to play, and an important part, too. Above all else, not forgetting the due claims of higher learning, it must be inspired by considerations of practical utility in these modern days.

The Hard Facts.

Mr. Ramsay MacDonald correctly interpreted British feeling in refusing to show excitement regarding the German reparations declaration. We wish, however, we could feel equally confident that the governments to be represented at Lausanne will realise by action that European economic recovery depends upon facing the hard facts of the situation. The need is for a permanent and genuine understanding. The signs are that it will be impossible. In the United States, in France and in Germany, the isolationists and the nationalists are forcing statesmen into false positions. In Germany, France is blamed for all Germany's troubles, and the Fascists have worked this feeling into an agitation which seems wilfully designed to prevent the necessary accord between the two countries. To blame another country is not an arduous task, but unfortunately untimely distribution of blame checks any kind of an understanding. People who are undergoing hardships will readily believe that all would be well with them were it not for the "foreigner," and they will resist concessions that in the long run would be in their own interest. If the French and German Governments were allowed to work out a practical agreement, it is probable that they would make quick progress. But behind them both are inopportune and violent Nationalist critics. The critics in one country excite the critics in another, and the statesmen hesitate to take such measures as they would undoubtedly take if they were not afraid of demagogic claims. In normal times the exploitation of discontent for political purposes is bad enough, but in abnormal times, such as the present, it is extremely dangerous. It blocks the way to reason. The Governments must be trusted in present circumstances, for on their unfettered action depends the possibility of an accord.

The report of the Hongkong Broadcasting Committee for December shows that the actual hours of transmission totalled 276.76, of which 164.25 were devoted to European programmes and 112.50 to Chinese programmes. The monthly percentages were:—European, 69.35; Chinese 40.65. During the month the European hours of transmission were extended on several occasions for relays of the Philharmonic Society performance and dance programmes over the Christmas Holidays. New licences issued during December totalled 46 and the total number issued during 1931 was 1,788.

The woman was not seriously injured.

Sentence of nine months' hard labour was imposed on a Chinese by Mr. Williams, at the Central Police Court this morning, when the man was charged with stealing a gold-mounted rattan bangle from the wrist of a child which was being carried by its mother in Connaught Road Central yesterday. The defendant was seen by a district watchman to slip the bangle off the child's wrist as the mother was about to engage a motor car.

A fine of $250, or three months' hard labour, was imposed by Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning on Li Kan, who was convicted for the unlawful possession of a dagger, a bludgeon and a silk sash. Mr. H. C. Kwan appeared on behalf of the defendant, and produced evidence of the latter's good behaviour. He submitted that for the last 14 years, defendant had been a law-abiding citizen and asked his Worship to treat him as leniently as possible. In passing sentence, his Worship said he could not impose a nominal fine as Mr. Kwan asked.

Steps on the Road to Recovery.

By "THE SENTINEL."

The present state of Europe and the causes of its unhappy plight make a depressing story, one which presents a strange commentary on the capacity of present-day democracies to manage their affairs, and reflects the tragic inability of post-war statesmanship to cope with the tasks which confront it. The first step on the long road to recovery is fearless recognition of actual facts; the next, unflinching courage in the framing of policies which accord with those facts.

In France and in the United States, the two countries which beside Britain are most nearly concerned with the causes as well as with the effects of the economic debacle, the hands of those charged with the direction of affairs are tied by considerations of domestic and party politics. The compelling significance of hard fact as well as the lessons of recent experience have no more escaped them than they have our own leaders; they see with uncomfortable clearness what lies ahead, and given the power to act they would act quickly and wisely. But though they ride in the whirlwind they are powerless to direct the storm. Their authority is as dependant as it is brief, and every sentence they utter in public, as well as every move they make in Council, must find approval with the strong-willed masses who are their masters.

When Senator Shortbridge inquired of the Senate, "Why don't they pay us in gold?" nobody in that august assembly thought fit to reply. But ten million citizens of the United States echoed why don't they? When Mr. James Beck reminded his fellow-Congressmen that "the quality of mercy is not strained," tens of thousands of his countrymen pointed to their great army of unemployed and the enormous Budget deficit. Who can convince the sturdy democracy of the United States that in this particular case above all others the quality of mercy is "twice blessed," blessing "him that gives and him that takes?" History is about to repeat itself, and Woodrow Wilson's fate will be Hoover's fate. The political pot is about to boil over, and the still, small voice of reason will be drowned amid the raucous cries of party wire-pullers and determined office-seekers. Few even among our friends across the Atlantic—and these are by no means insignificant either in numbers or standing—have any confidence that the new Congress will be ready to sacrifice its political opportunities in the interest of world- and American-recovery. If we are wise we will cease to look to the United States for further help in the solution of our troubles.

France has been taken aback by the hardening of opinion in the United States against further debt concessions. Le Temps whose views generally reflect those held by the Quai d'Orsay, bluntly declares that any reduction of the reparations due by Germany can be considered only on condition that an equivalent reduction in the debts owed to America is allowed. "The Americans will be paid just as much as the creditors of the Reich receive from the Germans."

France has missed her great opportunity. While the United States still basked in the warm glow of trade prosperity, President Hoover was in a position without endangering his own political future or that of the Republican Party, to propose a partial remission of the debts due from foreign Powers. But he made it clear, not altogether unreasonably, that such remission would be contingent upon an all-round reduction in expenditure on armaments. France was indignant at the "unpardonable" attempt to secure political ends by means of financial concessions, and would have none of it. To-day the warm glow has been replaced by an icy blast, and Senator Reed has discovered that the capacity of France to pay "is greater than our capacity to cancel, and we ought not to dream of any readjustment of the debt."

French politics are totally unlike our own. To begin with the Constitution of the Republic settled once and for all issues which in England dominated the political scene right up to the outbreak of the Great War, and no sharp line of controversy divides the numerous groups which contend for office. Moreover, unlike England, France is largely governed by her rural population, which has few thoughts beyond the weather, the crops and Germany, and it would be difficult to find elsewhere in Europe a more conservative countryside. The great bulk of Frenchmen have no politics, unless a deeply rooted objection to direct taxation and to any social legislation which might possibly involve such taxation can be termed politics. But there is always one great problem which can arouse their interest and their enthusiasm—the German peril, and French politicians are ever on the alert to prove their own strength and the weakness of their opponents in relation to this burning issue.

The Frenchman is far from being an Imperialist, nor is he in the least degree aggressive. He desires only to be left alone—à repos—to work hard and put aside sufficient against a rainy day. Germany must be made to pay, least in default he find himself more heavily taxed, and Germany must at all costs be kept under for fear that yet again, the thrifty tranquillity of the nation be disturbed.

If our reading of the trend of events in France and the United States is correct, it follows that Britain must look to herself, and to herself alone, for salvation. We need not quail at the prospect. We believe that Britain is better equipped to-day to weather the economic storms which are likely to break than any other of the great nations. Years of hardship and exhaustive effort during the war left us weary and spent. The psychological aftermath of those years brought luxury and indulgence; the need for eternal vigilance in national and domestic affairs was forgotten while we enjoyed again the amenities of life unoppressed by casualty lists and official communiques. An unwelcome vulgarism infected our social life and tainted our politics. Parliament lost much of its dignity and with it the hold which it had always possessed over the electorate, at the same time the politicians, almost prostrate by their war-time labours, surrendered the functions of leadership and allowed themselves to be dictated to by popular clamour.

It needed the stern challenge of August, 1931, to stir the nation out of its apathy and to recall to it its true standards. Then almost overnight Britain found herself again, a deepened sense of obligation took hold of all sections of the people, a great resolve to strengthen the foundations of our national life and to put an end to indifference and drift in national affairs. The challenge of August was answered in the General Election of October, which revealed to an astonished world a united Britain, renewed in its vigour and faith. The weeks that have passed since those eventful days have shown no weakening of that magnificent spirit, and the session of Parliament which has just come to an end demonstrated (Continued on Page 7.)

SHIP COLLISION
SEQUEL.C.N.C. & N.Y.K. CASE RESUMED.

PILOT'S EVIDENCE.

The consolidated actions in which the China Navigation Co., Ltd., and the Nippon Yusen Kaisha are claiming against each other for damages in respect of a collision in fog between the s.s. Kiangsu and the s.s. Toyooka Maru off Kowloon Dock Point, on the morning of March 22, were continued in the Supreme Court this morning, before the Chief Justice (Sir Joseph Kemp) in Admiralty Jurisdiction.

The China Navigation Company claim $40,000 damages, while the Nippon Yusen Kaisha claim $40,000.

Mr. Eldon Potter, K.C., together with Mr. F. C. Jenkin, K.C., instructed by Mr. M. M. Watson, of Messrs. Johnson, Stokes and Master, is for the China Navigation Company, while Mr. H. G. S. Sheldon, instructed by Mr. E. S. C. Brooks, of Messrs. Hastings, Denny and Bowley, is for the N.Y.K.

It is claimed by the China Navigation Company that the Toyooka Maru was at fault inasmuch as the Master steered his ship across the fairway in a fog while going out, while the incoming Kiangsu kept to the starboard side.

This morning, Mr. Sheldon quoted authorities which he claimed showed that if a ship did not know the position of another ship, there was nothing to compel the master to take helm action, it had been held that in such circumstances it was better to maintain course. If, however, the circumstances were such that the master deemed it necessary to take helm action, then he could do so. He maintained that the Toyooka Maru was right in keeping to her course as she did.

If Capt. Ritchie of the Kiangsu had not taken helm action, by taking his in-coming ship more over to starboard there would have been no collision.

Pilot's Evidence.

The evidence of the officers and pilot of the Toyooka Maru was then read, after which the Chinese pilot was called to give evidence. He said he was not prepared to say whether the Toyooka Maru had all way off just before the collision, but he could say for certain that she was not going as fast as one knot. The ship was, if moving at all, going less than half a knot, because the pilot boat was going ahead of the ship.

Mr. Sheldon asked witness for the reason why the ship's course was changed (which change took place on the fairway to the foreign man-of-war anchorage) and witness said the course was changed because the vessel was sailing towards buoy 120.

When Mr. Sheldon put the question again, witness gave substantially the same answer, adding that having changed course the fog came down. When the fog came down the same course was maintained and the fog signal was blown.

The case is proceeding.

NAVAL FUNERALS.

TWO RATINGS FROM
H.M.S. CUMBERLAND.

Full naval honours accompanied the funeral at Happy Valley yesterday afternoon of Able Seaman Patrick Ward, of H.M.S. Cumberland, whose death occurred in tragic circumstances on Saturday morning at Stonecutters, where he was found on the rifle range with a fatal shot wound through the head.

The official cortege, with the draped coffin resting on a gun-carriage drawn by shipmates, set out from the Naval Mortuary shortly before 3 p.m., headed by the Marine Band of the Cumberland, a firing party and buglers. At the gates of the Protestant Cemetery the coffin was transferred to the shoulders of members of the ship's company, and borne to the place of interment in the naval section of the cemetery.

The service at the graveside was performed by the Naval Chaplain of H.M.S. Kent. The obsequies concluded with the firing of three volleys over the grave and the sounding of the "Last Post."

Another Loss.
The ship's company of H.M.S. Cumberland suffered another loss in the demise of Stoker Tottman, which occurred at the Naval Hospital on Sunday night. Death was due to double pneumonia and pleurisy.

The funeral took place within half-an-hour of that of A. B. Ward, and like the preceding one, was marked by full naval honours.

In the mass of wreaths laid on both graves were included those from Captain T. B. Drew of H.M.S. Cumberland and other officers of the cruiser, from other men-of-war in port, and from the Cumberland shipmates of the deceased.

CORRESPONDENCE.

Kowloon Lighting.

[To the Editor, Hongkong
Telegraph.]

Sir,—For some time past I have had a feeling that the electric current supplied in Kowloon has, in the early evening at any rate, not been maintained at 200 volts.

I imagine I can detect a difference in my radio set but I have no instrument to test same.

Last night, before retiring, I put on my bedside light. It was so poor that I substituted another globe but without effecting any change. Just after eleven o'clock, the light suddenly became brighter—a marked difference.

In conclusion, may I be permitted to ask three questions?

(1) Can the distributing company assure me that the current is kept at 200 volts?

(2) Do radio users in Kowloon find that there is sometimes a lack of power, or

(3) Is this all imagination on my part?

FORECAST.STUDENTS SUPPORT
WANG CHING-WEI.

Nanking, Jan. 11.
The establishment of three Political Councils for China is forecast. These Councils are to be headed by General Chiang Kai-shek in the South-west, Marshal Chang Hsueh-liang in the north-east and Marshal Yen Hsi-shan in the north-west. The students of Nanking University are planning to go to Shanghai en bloc by the night express in order to persuade Mr. Wang Ching-wei to come to Nanking.

Mr. Kwai Chung-chi, the newly appointed President of the Central University was badly beaten and had to run for his life when he went to the University yesterday to take up his post.

NEW ZEALAND RIOT
NOVEL SCENES.WOMEN LIE DOWN ON TIAM TRACKS.

Dunedin, Jan. 11.
There were angry scenes in the city yesterday and again to-day when crowds of unemployed attempted to loot a large grocery store.

The trouble began yesterday morning when several hundred unemployed marched to the offices of the hospital board and demanded relief.

When the crowd was told that the board was prepared to deal with individual cases, there were cries of "All must get relief or none," and a general march followed to one of the largest grocery stores.

The police frustrated an attempt to loot the store, but before the crowd dispersed there were novel scenes in the streets, women lying on the tramway tracks to impede the traffic.

There was a recrudescence of the trouble to-day when the crowd made a second attack on the store.

A cordon of civilians and police prevented looting and the crowd dispersed when assured that food would be distributed in the afternoon.—Reuter's Special Service.

The Full Court decided yesterday against the point raised by Mr. Hin Shing-lo in the case of Chung King-man, charged at the Criminal Sessions with robbery. Subsequently, accused was sentenced to two years' hard labour.

Charged with possession of a carpenter's working bench, before Mr. Schofield at the Central Magistrate's Court, a Chinese declared:—"That thing is worthless, I would not accept it as a gift." The case was not to be so lightly dismissed. The police stated that while carrying the bench across his shoulder at 6 a.m. at West Point, defendant was hailed by an Indian constable and immediately deposited the bench on the ground and sat on it. He had the air of a tired wayfarer taking his rest, when the policeman came up to him. The Court considered it strange, however, that he should have preferred an uncomfortable sitting seat, and was unconvinced. Defendant was fined $10, or 14 days' hard labour.

REVENUE OFFICER'S
DEATH.DISTILLERY IRREGULARITIES
MENTIONED.

SUICIDE VERDICT.

Dramatic evidence was given by Mrs. Young, widow of Revenue Officer N. J. Young, at the Coroner's inquiry into his death, conducted by Mr. Fraser yesterday afternoon. Mr. Young, it will be recalled, was found lying dead on the hill-side near Laichikok Prison on the evening of November 4, 1931, with a shot wound through his head.

The jury empanelled consisted of Messrs. F. C. Clemo, (foreman), Li Chor-son and Fan Kwok-hong.

The Coroner said the inquiry was to investigate the circumstances attending the death of Revenue Officer N. J. Young, whose body was found on the hillside north of the Laichikok Prison. It was sent to the Public Mortuary on November 5. The dead man had a gunshot wound in the head, which was the primary cause of death.

Liu Yung, a married woman living in the Kau Pa Kang Village, testified that about 8 p.m. on November 4 she found the body of a man lying on the hillside above Castle Peak Road, whilst she was looking for a bullock. The dead man was dressed in European clothes. She made a report of her discovery to the Police.

Chan Tai-kam, a retired pensioner and uncle of the late witness, said he took the Police to the scene.

Evidence was given by Sergeant Goodwin of being taken to the spot where the body was lying, and found the place to be about 500 yards to the north of Laichikok Prison. There he saw the body of a European, dressed in a blue blazer, white gaberdine trousers, dark brown shoes, and dark-coloured socks. A grey felt hat was found lying alongside. A leather belt with an empty holster was tied round the body, and an automatic pistol was clasped in the palm of the right hand. There was one empty round jammed in the breach, the barrel of the pistol facing the right thigh. The body was lying face downwards, the right arm under the body and doubled up, and the left in line with the body. Witness removed the pistol. The body was badly decomposed but witness could see that there was a bullet wound in the right temple.

The place where the body was lying was a small ravine covered with bushes, and shielded from view of the road. It was impossible to see the body two yards away. Witness had the body removed to the Mortuary.

Sub-inspector Michael Murphy deposed that he saw the body brought to the Shamshui Police Station where he made a search and found a wallet in an inside pocket. In it were a bus ticket, a cheque book and a bunch of keys. Attached to this bunch of keys was a Revenue Office seal. The name of the deceased was on the bus ticket and the cheque book. No money at all was found inside the wallet or the pockets of the clothes of the deceased, but the body did not have the appearance of having been rifled.

Doctor Testifies.

Dr. K. H. Uttley said that about 9.30 a.m. on November 6, the body of the deceased was identified by his presence by Sergeant Goodwin. On examining the body, witness found that it was that of an adult male, five feet ten inches in height. He could not say whether it was that of a European or not as it was in a very decomposed condition. There was a bullet wound on the right side of the forehead, and an exit wound on the left side of the skull just above the temple.

All the organs were too decomposed to enable witness to say what state of health the body was in during life. Death was caused by a gunshot wound in the head. Witness was unable to make a more definite examination and it was impossible to say whether the wound had been self-inflicted or not.

Evidence regarding the pistol which was found with the body was given by L.S.A. Scott, the Police armorer.

Mr. Jack Johnston, of the Laichikok Prison, deposed that at about 6 p.m. on October 13, he met Revenue Officer Young walking along Castle Peak Road near the Laichikok Prison. Witness, who knew him by sight, nodded and the deceased responded.

Another European warder corroborated the evidence of seeing the deceased along Castle Peak Road at 6 p.m. on October 13.

Pun Pui, the "boy" of the deceased, said he last saw Revenue Officer Young on the Tuesday before his disappearance. He had known deceased for about a year. On this last occasion when he saw the deceased, the latter was normal both in appearance and manner.

Li Fun, a Chinese Revenue Officer, said he had known the deceased for about two years, and had always found him to be a genial man. The last time he saw him, the deceased did not seem to be unhappy and appeared to be busy.

Widow's Evidence.

Before giving evidence, Mrs. Young asked, "Why is it that there is only one European and two Chinese on the jury?"

His Worship—You are not entitled to ask that, Mrs. Young.

Mrs. Young—I am sorry.

Mrs. Young then asked permission to ask a question which was "not to be published," whereupon the Coroner handed her a piece of paper, on which she wrote something.

She stated that she had been married to the deceased since September, 1928. She met the deceased on the P. and O. Khiva on her way out from Hong Kong. In their married life they had had many domestic quarrels, which occurred very frequently. She had no intention of leaving her husband, but she thought he intended to leave her because she knew he had seen a lawyer on the subject of a separation.

In an outburst, witness cried, "Everybody is blaming me for his death. Everybody is blaming domestic troubles for the cause of his death in order to whitewash the Revenue Department. I won't allow it! Who's suffering for all this? I am."

After she had calmed down, witness referred to a gun which deceased had in his possession and with which he had, about a year and a half ago, threatened her, himself and everybody else. She had spoken to Mr. Lloyd, the Superintendent of Imports and Exports, about it.

She stated that her husband could have got long leave last year, but he would not leave his job because he said he could not hand it over to anybody else at the time.

A few days before his death, deceased had not been living with her at their flat. She first heard he was missing on October 15.

Witness alleged that deceased tried to send her to the asylum as insane, and kept a doctor in the house whom she did not like.

Witness went on to say that deceased had many Chinese visitors at their flat. She objected to that because they spent the whole evenings there and she had to confine herself to the bedroom.

Witness had been ill recently and her husband was worried over her illness. She had no reason to think that he would commit suicide; in fact he used to scorn it.

Naval Officer's Evidence.

Lt. Commr. Thompson of H.M.S. Tamar, who was living in the same building as the deceased and Mrs. Young, stated that he was on quite friendly terms with them. They did not visit one another very frequently. He knew that they had domestic troubles but he had never witnessed any of their quarrels. From what he had seen of them both, he did not think they were very happy together. Mrs. Young seemed to him to be of a nervous and excitable temperament and Mr. Young on the other hand was rather slow. Witness said the last time he saw Mr. Young, on October 12, the latter was rather depressed; in fact he had been so since October 4. He had never spoken of suicide, but had talked about his job in a vague way.

Alleged Irregularities.

Chief Preventive Officer Bullock said he had known Mr. Young for some time, and had found him to be very sober. As far as witness knew, the deceased was quite an efficient officer. The last time he saw him was on the morning of October 13 in the Revenue Office in Hongkong. He had heard of allegations against the dead man that there had been irregularities in a distillery and that he had apparently connived them. At the time he did not pay much attention to these allegations.

Mr. H. A. Taylor, Government Monopoly Analyst, deposed that he had known the deceased since 1927 when Mr. Young joined the Revenue Department. Deceased was due for long leave early last year, but did not take it because of two reasons which he told witness. The first was that Mrs. Young did not want to go to England and the second that he had no money. Witness had always found the deceased keen on his work.

STEPS ON THE ROAD

that our leaders are keenly aware of the opportunity as well as the great responsibility which await them.

So long as the nation holds fast to its present high purpose, so long above all as Parliament continues to reflect and to respect that purpose there is no need to fear the strain which approaching events may impose upon our resources and our sagacity. A Britain no longer enervated by apathy and despair, which has shaken off the disruptive influence of party politics and regained its freedom of action is a Britain worthy of her past. And a Britain with a splendid future.

Witness had heard of the allegations against the deceased. These allegations would certainly have involved an inquiry, and if sustained, the continuance of Revenue Officer Young's public service would certainly have been considered.

In his summing-up, the Coroner said the jury had heard all the evidence. Death was undoubtedly due to a gunshot wound in the head, and there was no doubt that it had been self-inflicted. They had heard the evidence of Mrs. Young, whom they must have seen to have a nervous and excitable temperament, and all the evidence showed that the deceased and Mrs. Young were not leading a happy life. He was, however, not asking the jury to discredit her evidence.

The jury returned a verdict of "Suicide whilst of unsound mind."

The additional income which may be expected to accrue to the University from this contribution has not yet been finally assigned to the various purposes of the institution. In the course of last year the Boards of the three Faculties drew up schemes of improvement and the Senate approved these schemes. But the Council of the University decided before finally allotting the additional income, which is not an overwhelming amount, to have the question of the provision which the University should make for the teaching of Chinese thoroughly investigated. The investigation is now being undertaken by a special committee which was appointed by the Court of the University. When the claims of Chinese have been adjusted against those of the other University activities, then the scheme for assigning the whole of the University's additional income will go before the Court of the University.

No Abolition of Chinese.

I hope that what I have just said will finally dispose of the absurd rumours recently afloat, that the Education Department and the University were concocting a secret and vile cabal to abolish the teaching of Chinese from the schools and the University of the Colony. A picture of almost fascinating horror was drawn—a picture of the Director of Education and the Vice-Chancellor banding together to do evil, to sap the very foundations of Chinese life. Disraeli once said in the House of Commons that "it is much easier to be critical than correct." Anyway, I can assure those who have been haunted by this dread, that their fearful imaginings are entirely without foundation. The University's School of Chinese Studies has been a failure, there is no gainsaying that. We have got to profit by the experience and to think out afresh how we can, always keeping the University's other activities in view, satisfy the obligation that our ordinance imposes upon us to make due provision in the Faculty of Arts for the study of Chinese Language and Literature. The University realizes that for centuries Chinese social and political life has been built up on the Chinese Classics and we sympathize wholeheartedly with those who would regard it as a serious blow to Chinese National character that this heritage should now be abandoned. But the enthusiasm for Chinese learning must not forget the exigencies of modern life. China wants not only administrators but doctors, engineers, lawyers, and commercialists, able to do business with the world. Don't make the yoke of Chinese study too heavy for the average boy or girl to bear. If you do, you will produce a reaction which will sweep your treasured studies away—a reaction which not even the Hanlins who are now flocking to Hongkong will be able to stem, even in this Colony.

Chinese Studies School.

Before leaving this subject, I must mention the opening by His Excellency in September last of the Tang Chi Ngonz School of Chinese. It is an admirable building—a worthy memorial of the generosity of him who gave it. Just inside the door of the building the donor has had inscribed in Chinese and English a legend to the effect that the building is given to the University to enable it to fulfil its statutory obligation in the matter of Chinese teaching to which I have just referred. Chinese studies are to have the first claim on the accommodation of the building; when that claim has been reasonably met, the University is at liberty to make the best use it can of the rest of the building.

Towards the end of last year the Universities China Committee in London sent a delegation of its members to China. The delegation consisted of Sir Reginald Johnston, Professor W. G. S. Adams of Oxford, and Professor P. M. Roxby of Liverpool. Sir Reginald Johnston and Professor Adams both visited Hongkong. The latter lived at the University for several days and was able to find out for himself not only what the University was actually doing in its various departments, but also what it aspires to do. Professor Adams' visit was a great encouragement. What he will tell his colleagues on the Universities China Committee about us I do not know, but on one point I am sure he will insist, and that is that if the British public are to increase the influence of British educational ideals in China, they can not begin even to move in that direction so long as those in authority in Britain persist in ignoring this Colony as one of the centres from which this influence should radiate.

What Mission Said.

And this brings me to the recent British Economic Mission to Far East. This was a mission of hard-headed business men, its members included no idealist University professors, no star-gazing educationists. We did not invite the Mission to visit the University, but many of its members came of their own accord—some more than once. Well, in their report the Commission have deplored the permeation of Modern China by American culture as prejudicial to the interests of British trade in China. They have, moreover, insisted that immediate steps should be taken to remedy this by increasing the number of Chinese students who pass from China to Universities, Technical Institutes and workshops in Britain. I have been asked what the University of Hongkong can do about it. It is a cheap rejoinder to say "we told you so," but as a fact if any one connected with this University ever ventured in the course of the last seven years to say what the Trade Mission has now proclaimed, he was either ignored or snubbed. And yet a Liberal M.P. speaking in the House of Commons in 1924 in the course of the debate on the Chinese Indemnity (Application) Bill said—

"We know perfectly well that in the past many of the large American industrialists, especially in the Engineering trade have been in the habit of educating Chinese in their universities. . . . When we are asked to tender for certain work, we invariably find that the Chinese engineers have drawn up the specifications in such a form as to render it impossible to get an order and it has been drawn up to send to the factory in which the engineer has been educated in America."

Need for Scholarships.

This University is in desperate need of scholarships which would take its picked students to the Universities and workshops of Britain, but it has no endowed scholarships, and no funds from which scholarships could be created. Before the Boxer Indemnity was finally disposed of, the Government of Hongkong implored His Majesty's Government for a reasonable sum for the creation of scholarships, but to no avail. The Americans have at their annual disposal substantial sums for scholarships tenable in the United States, and these scholarships, which are handled by the China

Foundation for the promotion of Education and Culture came originally from the American share of the Boxer Indemnity. Surely the allocation from the British share of the indemnity of a reasonable sum, say £200,000, to form an endowment fund for scholarships tenable in Britain would not have very seriously hampered the rehabilitation of railways in China and other productive enterprises of the Government of China for which over ten million pounds would still have been available. But it is vain to ponder what might have been.

Last July the Universities of the British Empire met in Congress at Edinburgh. This University was represented at the Congress at which many a wise thing was said. I can not refrain in conclusion from quoting something of what Lord Meston the Chancellor of the University of Aberdeen contributed to the conference:—

"There are certain things," Lord Meston said, "essential to the well-being of their peoples, which he believed their Universities were doing, which ought to be done by their Universities and which could not systematically be done except by their Universities."

Dispersal of Illusions.

Paramount among these services is to his mind the dispersal of illusions. It is the fashion nowadays for them to lecture each other on the unwisdom of keeping their sons and daughters in ignorance of the mysteries of sex. Far more mysterious than sex is mind. Of all its mysteries the truest is its greedy acceptance of the impossible. It is this breaking with illusions which the University spirit could ease and expedite. . . . First cousin to illusion is the catchword; and here also their Universities have a fertile field of action. Catchwords seem to be as essential to the popular digestion as certain morning papers and patent medicines. Self-determination and self-expression, democracy and bureaucracy, free trade and protection, nationalism and rationalisation—the list is endless; and nine men out of ten never give an intelligent thought to their meaning. Their Universities could, and he believed that they alone could—insist on nailing all those phrases to the counter and dissecting them, instead of pinning them on to banners and marching after them in circles. . . . Yet another task on which their Universities active is the passing of certain insolvent conceptions through the Bankruptcy Court, so that plain honest people would refuse to give them further credit. Spirituality is one of these. Are we not weary of hearing of "negro spirituals" and various cranks on their "spiritual homes" and the "spiritual undercurrent" in some strike of butchers' assistants? Cheap enthusiasm and flabby emotions are not things of the spirit. . . . Another conception which is continually being prostituted is idealism. The greatest enemy of the ideal to-day is idealism—or what passes for it. It is the umbrella put up to shelter all who cultivate the second-best, loose in their thinking, shoddy in their efforts, vague about their goals. A piece of barefaced political intrigue is not rendered respectable by being acclaimed as idealism.

My constant desire is that this University will ever strive, however narrow its scope, to do honest work and to free the minds of its students from the tyranny of catchwords, illusion and specious idealism. In so far as it succeeds in this, the University of Hongkong will be doing something to restore China and the World to sanity.

JAPAN PREPARES TO ADVANCE.

BIG ROUD-UP OF BANDITS.

Peking, Jan. 11.

Further indications of an imminent Japanese advance are conveyed in reports of the construction of aerodromes at Chichow prior to the commencement of a general offensive against Jehol.

Ten aeroplanes have been re-connoitring on the Fengtien-Jehol frontier.—Reuter.

Bandit Drive.

Tokyo, Jan. 11.

Preparations for extensive military operations against bandits in South Manchuria are reported to be under way. Thirteen troop trains are being held in readiness at Mukden to start at a moment's notice, according to press despatches.

Although most foreign observers appear to consider that the extension of the bandit problem will require fully a year and need far larger forces than are at present available, the Japanese military authorities seem satisfied that they will be able to complete the suppression of banditry within three months without reinforcements.—Reuter.

Britain's Attitude.

Tokyo, Jan. 11.

It is authoritatively learned that the Japanese Ambassador in London, Mr. Matsudaira has transmitted to the Foreign Office here the British request that Japan confirm her declaration as regards the "open door" policy concerning Manchuria, and as a consequence Mr. Matsudaira will be authorised to reaffirm the Japanese pledges in this respect.

Although the request for a fresh reinsurance is apparently considered somewhat redundant, official circles are clearly gratified that Britain has taken what they consider "a more friendly course" than adopted by America.—Reuter.

Kwantung Governor.

Mr. Mannosuke Yamaoka, a former Director of Police, has been appointed Civil Governor of Kwan-

REPARATIONS TANGLE.

BRITISH NEWSPAPER VIEWS.

London, Jan. 11.

Commenting on Dr. Bruening's statement, the Times says:

"The supreme question which participants at Lausanne will have to consider is whether there is any real chance of recovery in Germany—and therefore averting the danger of a collapse in the rest of the world—as long as there is hauling over her the prospect of being called upon in the near future to resume these payments, which drain her economic resources and strain her international financial exchanges. The answer can be found only through a thorough and frank discussion of the whole situation. So much depends on a solution of the problem—not only for Germany but for her creditors as well, and indeed for every country in the world including those who seem to have no direct interest in it—that there is no room in its discussions for any prejudice or pre-conception, for national synpathies and antipathies, or for political considerations of any kind.
The only things that matter are the economic realities."

The Daily News thinks that the statement clears the air, and Lausanne can now settle down to realities, but makes the point that "no reasonable person, even in Germany, would be prepared to swear to the economic impossibility of Germany's resuming some small payment of reparations in the distant future if world trade revived."

Cannot Pay Now.

The Daily Telegraph says:
"That Germany cannot pay reparations now is clear enough, and so much was stated in the Basic report. But that she will still be unable to pay anything in three or five years time, no one can assert today. The strength of the German position is that she cannot crash without involving others in stupendous losses.
To go to Lausanne without a prospect of Franco-British co-operation, and with the certainty of a violent explosion of Franco-German wrath, promises no fruitful result."

The Daily Herald says the statement will bring the world down to a discussion of realities, and makes Lausanne worth while;
adding that the suggestion that the conference should now be abandoned, and a creditors' meeting be held instead, cannot be taken seriously.

Other Concerns.

At the Disarmament Conference due to open at Geneva under the chairmanship of Mr. Arthur Henderson on February 2, the British delegation will include the Prime Minister, Foreign Secretary (Sir John Simon), Dominions Secretary (Mr. J. H. Thomas), Secretary for Air (Lord Londonderry), and First Lord of the Admiralty (Sir Bolton Eyles-Monsell).

It will be unnecessary for all these Ministers to be present simultaneously.

In view of the heavy demand which the approaching conference will make on Ministers' time, and the important issues that await discussion, it is anticipated that members of the Cabinet will be in frequent consultation during the next fortnight.

RECENT SNATCHING INCIDENT.

PRISON TERMS FOR TWO MEN.

The case in which three men were charged in connection with a snatching incident at Cox's Road last week was concluded at the Kowloon Magistracy, before Mr. Fraser, this morning, when the first defendant was sentenced to four months' hard labour and the third to six months. The charges against the second defendant were withdrawn, he having turned King's evidence.

Mr. C. Y. Kwan appeared on behalf of the second defendant, Sergeant Edwards, who was charged with the snatching.

The charges against the defendant were considered to be of a serious nature and receiving property which they knew to have been stolen.

It was alleged by Sergeant Edwards that the second and third defendants were walking with the complainant, Miss C. Y. Lin and her adopted sister, on the evening of January 5 when the first defendant came from behind and took away a gold band valued at $310 and a platinum wrist watch worth $310.

The first defendant Ng Choi, had a clean record, but the third was found to have a previous conviction.

BRITISH TRADE FAIR.

THE LARGEST EVER YET STAGED

London, Jan. 11. Despite the world trade depression, the British Industries Fair, which opens in London and Birmingham on February 22nd, will be the largest ever known.

The number exhibits will be greater than at any of the 17 previous Fairs, and the stand frontage will measure sixteen miles on a floor space of thirty acres.

At the week-end, ten thousand copies of the show catalogue were sent to prospective buyers abroad, and the volume forms a useful guide to the remarkable range of manufactures which will be displayed.—British Wireless.

IN A PROHIBITED STREET.

P. W. D. MOTOR CYCLIST SUMMONED.

TRAFFIC COURT.

Mr. A. Brailsford, a Telegraph Engineer of the Public Works Department, was summoned before Mr. Schofield at the Central Court this morning for riding his motor-cycle, No. 461, in Old Bailey, which is closed to motor traffic, without the permission of the Commissioner of Police.

Inspector-General of Police, Mr. Nield, of the Traffic Department, putting the case for the police, said: Mr. Brailsford came from Queen's Road into Old Bailey. I saw him from the back window of the Traffic Office, and he had a young lady on the back of his cycle, your Worship.

Inspector Alexander, representing the Police, said that the defendant had not a good record.

His Worship recorded a conviction and imposed a fine of ten dollars.

Other Cases.

Mr. A. Becker, summoned for not carrying proper headlights while driving his car, No. 1489, through Stubbs Road on the evening of January 5, pleaded guilty.

He admitted that one of the headlights was out, this being due to the wiring having broken. That night, he said, he was out with his family, and having a long distance to go—a matter of eight miles to Shouson Hill—he had thought that he would leave the matter over till the following morning. He had no trouble with the lamp before.

The defendant, who had been driving for a year, was shown to have a clean record, and his Worship decided that a caution would meet the case.

A lorry driver was fined $10 for passing a stationary tramcar in Hennessy Road on the left. It was stated that passengers alighting from the tramcar were prevented from crossing over to the pavement, and were forced to press themselves close to the tram to avoid the car.

WOMAN TRADER ROBBED.

YOUTH STEALS BOX OF JEWELS.

During the absence, from the hotel of a woman travelling trader, who stayed with friends for one night at Shaokwan, a Chinese youth who had made her acquaintance during her short visit to the Colony went to her room and stole a quantity of jade and ornaments to the total value of $165.

The theft was reported to the police yesterday, the woman stating that when she booked her room at the Yip Sang Shan Hotel at 8, Connaught Road West on Sunday afternoon, she met the youth, with whom she had a conversation. Shortly after she had arrived in the Colony she went to visit some friends at Shaokwan and remained there for the night. On her return to her room, she was informed by the hotel staff that the youth with whom she had been talking the previous day had taken away her box of jewels.

WOMAN OPIUM SMUGGLER.

JUMPS OFF EXPRESS TRAIN.

Li Yung-mui, the woman, who was injured through jumping off the Canton-Kowloon express on Saturday evening, was charged before Mr. Fraser, at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with unlawful possession of nine taels of opium.

The prosecuting officer stated that the defendant jumped off the 7.35 p.m. express at Yumati on Saturday. She was injured and taken to the Kwong Wah Hospital, where she was found to have the contraband tied round her legs.

His Worship:—That was a very rash thing to do, wasn't it?

It appeared that the train was slowing down at the crossing at Yumati, or the woman might have been very seriously hurt.

His Worship imposed a fine of $250, or two months' hard labour.

HOME FOOTBALL.

SHOCK FOR LUTON AT HOME.

London, Jan. 11. In the English League, Division III (South) to-day, Luton Town, who were defeated at home in the Cup on Saturday, again experienced the taste of defeat at home. Clapton Orient overplayed them and won by five goals to one. In the Northern Section, Halifax and Rotherham shared points, each side netting once.—Reuter.
